

1. The 11 Career Interest Areas

I. Literary interest reflects a natural attraction to the world of words—reading, writing, analysis, and communication.

If you enjoy storytelling, crafting essays, or interpreting language, this subfactor captures that passion.

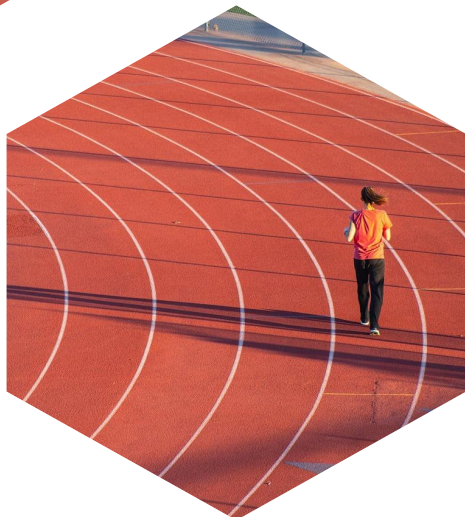

II. Artistic interest indicates a strong desire for creative self-expression.

It relates to imagination, design, performing arts, and an appreciation for aesthetics and freedom. Individuals high in this area often feel limited by rigid systems and prefer fluid, expressive environments.

III. Physical interest captures your preference for movement, action, and hands-on work. If you enjoy being outdoors, staying active, or participating in kinetic or athletic activities, this subfactor reflects that inclination.

IV. Experimenting reflects a deep-seated curiosity and interest in understanding how things work. You may enjoy solving puzzles, conducting tests, running experiments, or learning through discovery. This subfactor is often associated with scientific thinking and innovation.
